Ideas? Drop Them Traffic Lights In Suggestion Box Now at 62nd

Expressed ideas on what should and should not be done at the Student Center may soon find their way into a suggestion box.

"We're having difficulty communicating with the students," said Donald Pfisterer, dean of students.

He was speaking at a meeting of the Student Center Committee and referring to an improved status for the Center in campus life.

Of prime importance in planning for efficient use of the Center, he pointed out, is the wishes and needs of the student body.

"How can we find out what they want; what they will support?" he asked.

The idea of a suggestion box emerged as an approved solution.

Plans for an all-school "birthday celebration" for the Center, a year old in March, were discussed.

Specific plans were shelved until the group's next meeting next Wednesday.

Lowell Baumer was selected as a temporary co-chairman, representing the student body, to serve with Dean Pfisterer in the coordinating the committee actions.

Initial steps were taken in the formation of a sub-committee in charge of planning activities and a second to handle publicity for them.

LOOK Features Vicki

Vicki Trickett, the former OU student discovered in Hollywood by Tab Hunter, will be the subject of a picture story in next week's Look Magazine. The 20-year-old starlet is now under contract at Columbia Pictures.

Stan Yank's Only Irritations Are His Overzealous Helpers

By Bill Grow

Stan Yank has spent several hours on the phone this week in an attempt to solve a most unusual and pressing problem.

He is blind and is trying to find someone to read his text book assignments to him.

"Readers haven't been much of a problem in the past," the 26-year-old junior explained. "I've had one student handling the job for the past three semesters but now his schedule has ruled him out."

Stan has had three readers so far this year but class conflicts have caused each to drop the job.

Blind from birth, Stan is very proud of his ability to get around the campus and the city easily and inconspicuously. When asked if there was any particular problem in his busy schedule he had to stop and think.

He finally admitted, reluctantly, that he has one irritation—over-helpful people.

"Some people just aren't happy unless they help me across the street," he said.

Other, actually annoying types are the ones who won't let him perform certain jobs because they are afraid he will hurt himself or become embarrassed by failure.

"If I quit every job that looked tough, I wouldn't be at OU—I'd stay home in bed," he declared.

Among the tough jobs he has tackled is that of becoming an accomplished jazz musician. A trio in which he plays has just completed a two-month engage-

The campus entrance at Sixty-second and Dodge now has a traffic light. The signal at Sixtieth Street will be removed.

"It should make access and clearance to the University faster and easier," said Clarence Lefler, building and grounds head.

An informal poll of students, however, raised some doubts as to the validity of his theory.

Many feel the new light will cause a great amount of congestion in the center of the campus. They say the drive is too narrow to carry any great amount of traffic.

No small matter, according to most students interviewed, is the flood of pedestrian traffic which crosses the drive during class breaks.

Lefler pointed out, however, that no plans have been made for any change at the sandbagged Sixtieth Street entrance and that any aid to expanding entry facilities is a step in the right direction.

Lambi Moves to Better Position

"Overwhelming advantages of larger research facilities" at the University of Saskatchewan (Canada) have taken Dr. Ivo Lambi from the OU history department.

In citing reasons for his resignation, announced at last week's Board of Regents meeting, he added that "a much lighter teaching load—nine hours—and higher rank and salary" were offered.

ment at the Birchwood Club.

His marriage in 1957 quickly squelched any travel plans he held. While attending a rehabilitation class in Lincoln he decided he liked it so well he married his teacher.

"I needed private tutoring at home," he chuckled.

"She pressured me into enrolling at OU," Stan admits, "but it certainly was no mistake. I feel that I've accomplished much, both in studies and in meeting people."

His wife, Berit (a Scandinavian name), is also blind.

But the happy couple "sees" life at its fullest in the presence of their blond, blue-eyed daughter, Shelley Rae, 20 months.

"She's a little cyclone," Stan's wife concedes.

Will Quality Remain?

Bail: Tax-Hike 'Only Way To Maintain High Standard'

Committee Told: 'Get Off Our Backs and Job Will Be Done'

By Chuck Barry

Basketball Coach Sonny Means dropped a bombshell on the Activities Committee meeting covering his department Tuesday.

"I'm not going to defend basketball at OU but I'm going to tell my problems with it," he began. "I don't have any statistics to present because I don't want to start any arguments."

Means charged that Omaha high school athletes have a "natural negative attitude" toward OU because of the past losing record and the idea that going away to school is more glamorous.

"This might be changed if we could establish a tradition of winning but more grants-in-aid are needed," he stated.

"You never know how many grants you have or what your budget is," he said, adding that "when a cut in the budget is necessary it seems to always come from the athletic department."

Regarding his teams' performances, he said: "I don't want to play a freshman team every year—I'm getting lumps and I don't like it."

OU May Get Ford Monies

Nearly 20 thousand dollars a year for six years has been made available for government students at the University of Omaha, Creighton and the University of Nebraska.

Standing in its way, however, is the Nebraska Legislature.

In announcing the grant last week, the Ford Foundation stipulated that the state must supply and additional $12,000 a year for the same period before any funds would be allocated.

Aimed at supplying "experts in the field of state government," the grants would go to graduate students in "law, political science, journalism or any related field."

The combined $117,000 dollars from Ford and the state's $72,000 would be divided among as many as 36 students who would be paid $400 per month.

Though each grant would cover only a year's study, a recipient could conceivably be awarded consecutive fellowships for two or even three years, depending on the length and depth of his study.

"It would be a tremendous program," declared President Milo Bail, when informed of the grant. "It would be especially valuable here in Nebraska where the Unicameral represents a unique form of state government."

Commenting on the legislative stumbling block, however, the president was somewhat less than optimistic.

"I've heard that the Senators have already decided against any such allocation," he said. "But as far as I know, there has not been a specific bill introduced for them to act upon."

If passed, Dr. Bail explained, the program would be under the direction of a Nebraska University professor.

Recipients would be selected by a committee made up of representatives of each of the three schools.

"It's possible," he added, "that all six could come from the same institution. It just depends on the qualifications of those eligible."

"If Caniglia and I would have won a few more games this year we wouldn't be here before this committee now."

The coach then demanded: "Get off the coaches' backs and eventually they'll get the job done."

He charged that existing basketball facilities are "inadequate" and called for an "inexpensive" outdoor court plus a new physical education building.

He noted that he has nine grants-in-aid at his disposal and called for an increase with time to build a team.

Slamming out at the alumni, Means charged that a few helped with donations and setting up jobs for athletes, but most of them "just gave a song and dance routine."

Athletic Department Head Virgil Yelkin then rose and told Means that he need "only ask" if he didn't know what his budget is or how many grants he has.

"What we need is a more positive attitude in our department and I personally do not agree with you Mr. Means," Yelkin jabbed.

Bronze Plates in AA, SC Buildings

Three bronze plaques were added to the campus scene this week.

Dedicatory plates were affixed to walls in the Applied Arts Building and the Student Center. Each bears the names of the administration, the Board of Regents and the planning committees.

Outside the engineering shop is a plaque in memorial to Glen L. Martin who, in his will, left the University one hundred thousand dollars towards the purchase of engineering equipment. He was president of the old Martin Bomber Corporation located at the present Offutt Air Force Base.

Blood Drive to Begin March 2

Students wishing to give blood March 2, are urged to sign up today and February 27-28 in the lobby of the Student Center.

The campus goal for the 1961 blood drive, sponsored by the student council, is 200 pints.

Students under 21, who must have parental consent, may pick up permission slips from the Dean of Students office.

Persons who have had colds within the last three weeks, have had shots or who have had any alcohol during the previous 24 hours may not donate.

Organization chairmen, named to sign up volunteers from their groups, are: Larry Hill, Theta Chi; Dave Kundel, Tau Kappa Epsilon; Ron Sprandel, Lambda Chi Alpha; Ken Brink, Sigma Phi Epsilon and Ken Peterson, Independents.

Midge Butters is chairman for Zeta Tau Alpha. Other sororities have not named chairmen.

Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity has already given blood.

Mr. Paul Borge is in charge of the faculty donations.

Capping Tonight

Student nurses from OU will receive their caps in a ceremony at the Broadway Methodist Church, Council Bluffs, at 8 p.m. tonight.

Garbage collection is equated with education, so far as tax support from the city of Omaha is concerned.

Both receive a two-mill share of the taxpayer's dollar or, more clearly defined, for every thousand dollars of assessed evaluation, two dollars is taken for the garbage man, two for the University of Omaha.

"I'm afraid we're going to have to ask for more—probably another mill or two," President Milo Bail declared this week.

State Must Act

He cited steadily rising costs in all phases of education and the need for upping faculty salaries "if we are to maintain the quality standards we have established and are continually striving to improve."

Action by the state legislature is necessary before any increase in the University's levy can become a reality, however, and Dr. Bail said he has no plans for a move this year.

"But I think it will have to be done at the next session of the Unicameral (in 1963)," he emphasized.

New York Is Free

He pointed out that students here are paying for "roughly 50 per cent" of their education while the proportion met at most state (tax-supported) institutions is "closer to 20 or 25 per cent."

"New York City's municipal university is tuition-free," he added.

Day and night regular classes, special short courses and other University offerings brought "more than 30,000 persons out here last year," the president noted. "I don't believe any one could claim that Omaha is not getting its money's worth."

But he stressed that everything costs money "and education is no exception. I see no way that we can hold our own for more than another two years."

Tuition Hike, Too

He said that universities across the country are paying "more and more for top caliber instructors and if we're going to hold the ones we have—let alone attain new men—we've got to have more funds."

Following the proposed tax increase, Dr. Bail predicted a tuition increase but hastily added that it is "at least a few years off."

Gap in Missiles Linked to Psych By Dr. Jaynes

Does psychology have a bearing on the much-discussed missile gap?

Dr. William E. Jaynes believes it does.

Russia and the United States have taken different approaches to psychology, he said, "and that difference has resulted in a technological gap between the countries."

This theory will be discussed when Dr. Jaynes, head of the OU psychology department, takes the podium at the next Legacy of Man lecture, Feb. 28.

"Psychology in the United States has tended to be theoretical," he declared. "It has led into the laboratory and away from reality."

Russia, in contrast, takes a more applied approach, the doctor continued. "Theory is highly idealistic and in being such it is capitalistic. Thus, it had to go."

His talk will be presented at 8 p.m. in the Conference Center Auditorium.

There are more than 50 scholarships and grants awarded by the University annually.

Beyond 30

By Ken Zimmerman

No secret to anyone is the fact that student activities at this University are provoking some intense and sincere soul-searching.

In addition to the much-publicized committee presently engrossed in athletics, there is another, concerned with the utilization of the Student Center.

An editorial comment elsewhere on this page points up a justification for study and calls for a let's-take-it-easy attitude.

Let us consider then what really is here at stake; what it's all about.

There have been some battle lines drawn and, in some instances, hard feelings have resulted from sides taken. This aspect is indeed unfortunate.

Thrust suddenly into prominence, however, is a question of relative values—of whether programs of limited participation and benefit may be sanctioned at the expense of a majority.

As this complex premise becomes more sharply defined, it subsequently gains stature.

The committee's findings, conclusions and ultimate recommendations—if followed—may well be taken as precedent for every urban-situated university in this nation.

It cannot be assumed that our predicament is isolated or purely local. It must be a question foremost at Denver, Wichita, Ottumwa, Ia., and the City College of New York. Their eyes must be upon us.

Whether at its formation the committee attributed to itself such a burden is irrelevant. It is now a reality.

What I would like to here say is that 56 committee members, though they may comprise a group so large as to be unwieldy, do not possess the ability to speak for every student who wishes to be heard.

How do you, the student, feel about a University Theater at which less than 10 per cent of the enrollment find pleasure (only an example, if you please)?

The Gateway, as a reflection of University thought and attitude, would like to know. Your thoughts need expression and we would like the opportunity to air them.

Letters for publication (or otherwise) are always welcome at the Gateway office and we urge you, especially in regard to this critical question, to express yourselves.

Civil Service to Visit

Representatives from the U.S. Civil Service Commission will be on campus March 10 to discuss employment opportunities in the Government with interested seniors.

The interviews, the only to be offered this year, may be attended by making a prior appointment in the Placement Office, room 248 in the Administration Building.

OU Journalists Find: 'Being Natural Only Way To Be Poised'—Miss America

By Gail Grove and Pam Stronberg

Enrolling at the University of Michigan next fall will be a "new experience and a new challenge" for a young lady from Montague, Michigan. Her name is Nancy Anne Fleming, "Miss America of 1961."

She arrived in Omaha Monday for a three-day series of style shows at one of the local department stores and Monday afternoon was a guest of radio WOW at a press conference with Omaha journalism students.

With a scholarship of $10,000 given to her with her title, she plans to major in communication art, a combination of home economics and radio-TV journalism. Miss Fleming said she anticipated no problems in the switch from her much publicized reign as Miss America, a year she "didn't expect to have," to the role of a college freshman.

Other plans for the future? Miss America wants to become a writer for a woman's fashion magazine and "eventually marry." At the present, all dates are chaperoned by two sponsors from the Miss American contest. Miss Fleming looks for the qualities of intelligence and sincerity in her dates and wants "someone who is interested in many different things. I don't like boys who are classed, such as a football hero."

"You cannot work toward or plan to be Miss America," she said, but with her sewing talent, beauty, poise and personality she won the title and has, since then, traveled an estimated 80,000 miles as Miss America.

She has toured half of the reign is ended, expects to have appeared in all states. Her appearances include civic appearances, crowning new "Misses" and attending major "bowl" games. She expects to be in Nebraska next summer to crown the new "Miss Nebraska."

Miss America is five feet six inches tall, weighs 116 pounds, and her measurements are 35-22-35. She has a fair complexion, dark brown hair and grey-green eyes.

Miss America has found during her tour that:

—she needs clothes that pack easily,
—eastern girls have a tendency to grow up too fast,

—"publicity and fame make you conscious of the fact that anything you say or do may be published, therefore you must always be on your best behavior."

—"being natural is the only way to be poised."

"Every girl has a chance to become Miss America" and Nancy Anne Fleming, a small-town girl with a dimpled smile, is still thrilled with her title of "Miss America of 1961."

Advanced Advances Omitted From Catalog?

In attempting to second-guess their professors many college students will stay up nights, attend classes and even study in order to obtain the knowledgeable feeling that comes with success.

A unique method of second-guessing on the soon-to-be printed University Catalog occurs on the bulletin board of the Delta Sigma Pi, a business fraternity.

The fraternity tacked up a list of college courses it said will be offered next semester which had been left out of the catalog. The list:

FLG 101 — Flunking Out: Methods and procedure; no prerequisite. The course has recently been added by the college as an answer to rising enrollment figures, in lieu of raising the curves of the C-courses even higher. The course presents several time-proven methods for permanently relieving students from the rigors and strains of college life. Included are: "Let's go bowling," "Extracurriculars can be fun," "How to sleep 24 hours a day and like it," "Study can cause cancer," and others. Up to six semester hours of enjoyment can be received from this course.

TVL 337 — Life on Another Campus: prereq., male. This popular survey course includes field trips throughout the year to the campus where girls are girls and so are boys. Topics include: "Floor plans of sorority houses and other women's domiciles," "The effective use of aliases," "Choice parking areas in and around Omaha," "Lincoln isn't too far away," and others.

COF 115 (215, 315, etc.) — Conversation and Caffeine. This course is held daily (as arranged) at the Student Center. Attendance isn't required, it doesn't have to be. Covered in the course are "Things to do while waiting in line," "Strengthen your digestive tract in only 15 minutes a day," "Clever things to say about odd-looking people at other tables," "The art of making delicious coffee," and "Coffee dates can be snaked."

NKG 111, 211, 311—P. E. with Elements of Anatomy: This course covers a wide variety of subjects and activities with special emphasis on individual initiative. Movies and church activities are offered for the beginner, while woods parties and drive-ins are offered for the more advanced students. Those achieving proficiency in the course are urged to take NKG 511.

NKG 511—Advanced Advances: prereq. NKG 311. This stimulating course consists mainly of labs and very small discussion groups (seldom over two persons). Marriage license or permission of the instructor is required.

In Passing—Progress Our Most Important Product?

The concern and furor created by the Activities Study Committee has grown out of proportion to its entire purpose and reason for existence.

Justification for the committee's formation lies in the fact that the University is trying to keep up with the changing times and endeavoring to modernize and streamline the current extracurricular activities now practiced.

People with minimal observation power should be able to see and understand that academic programs and extracurricular activities molded and used in the 1920's and 30's cannot stand the test of time and be applicable to current wants, needs and necessities of present-day society.

Everyone should be aware of the fact that what is being done is progress and progress means change which is ultimately to the benefit of all—both student and taxpayer.

Indians Resume Old Habits, Lose to Creighton, Drake

Omaha University basketballers received rough treatment from cross-town rival Creighton and a tough Drake University squad in two of its final games of the 1960-61 campaign.

Creighton handed the Indians their 14th defeat 79-56 Saturday night at the Fieldhouse.

A crowd of over 3,000 watched the Bluejays open with a 5-0 lead before the Indians hit the scoring column.

The Tribe managed to move ahead 9-8 minutes later but the lead was short lived, as the Hill-toppers grabbed a 13-9 advantage and were never headed.

42-23 Lead

The tall Bluejays held a 42-23 lead at the half.

The Indians nibbled at the 19 point Creighton halftime lead narrowing the margin to 10 points at one time mid-way through the second half.

Fouls prevented the Indians from moving any closer as Glenn Hepburn, Bruce Hunter and Joe Neuberger fouled out.

Creighton converted 35 of 50 gift tosses to the Indians 18 of 27.

Noisey Contest

Both Indian Coach Sonny Means and Creighton boss Red McManus were off the bench protesting calls made by the officials in the noisy contest.

McManus once turned and waved his hands at the OU fans in protest to the crowd's agitation.

Omaha's Sam Sims put on a display of ball handling while chalking up 21 points. This was the third time the freshman forward had scored over 20 points since joining the squad at the start of the semester.

Drake Rolls

The Drake Bulldogs rolled to an impressive 110-49 conquest of the Indians Tuesday. Athletic Director Virgil Yelkin said that the 110 points was definitely a new Fieldhouse record.

The Bulldogs took command of the contest early and moved to a 54-17 halftime lead.

The Iowans continued the point barrage the second half using substitutes almost entirely.

With 10 minutes remaining in the contest, the Indians trailed 82-27.

Sam Sims again topped all Indian scorers with 14 points while Wendell Wiksell added 13.

Coed Swim Club To Hold Election

The University of Omaha Water Sports Club will meet Sunday evening from 7 to 8:30 at the Jewish Community Center. The group will hold its election of officers and all interested University women are invited to attend.

The coed swim club will meet every other week at the JCC. Those not belonging to the club must pay a fee of one-dollar each time they swim. Members pay a dues of two dollars for which they gain the use of the pool each session.

The group is sponsored by Joni Jorgenson, women's physical education instructor.

WRA Basketball

Chi Omega proved victorious over Sigma Kappa to wrap up the Women's Recreation Association volleyball championship last Tuesday. Resolving the three-way tie for first place, Sigma Kappa settled for second place and Zeta Tau Alpha ran a close third.

With the climax of the volleyball playoffs, the WRA launched its basketball schedule yesterday as Unaffiliated faced ISA at 4 o'clock in the P. E. hut.

Next week will find Unaffiliated matched with Alpha Xi Delta on Tuesday, Febr. 28; ISA will meet Sigma Kappa on Wednesday; March first; and Chi Omega will oppose Zeta Tau Alpha on Thursday, March second.

Indoor Meet Starts Today

Omaha University will host the Central Intercollegiate Conference Indoor Track Championships tonight and tomorrow afternoon.

Thursday, Feb. 16, Omaha U. won a triangular with Simpson College and Morningside. The Indians scored at least a point in every event.

Indians Win Seven

The team scores were Omaha, 56 1/3; Simpson, 43 5/6; and Morningside, 28 5/6. Indian thin-clads finished first in seven events and second in five.

Roger Sayers won the 60-yard dash, 60-yard low hurdles and the 440 yard dash. This was the third straight meet in which he won these three events.

Emporia Team To Beat

"Emporia still looks like the team to beat, with Fort Hays pushing them all the way," said Cardwell. He went on to say that Pittsburgh is a possible darkhorse, but little is known about its team as it wasn't here for last year's conference meet.

The Indians have already broken two Fieldhouse and three school records and Cardwell feels a couple more might be broken in the Conference meet.

The preliminaries will begin at 7:30 Friday evening. Saturday's finals will begin at 1:30 in the afternoon.
